

BRISBANE

JACK REDDEN

MID - $528,400

Consistently around the 100 points per game mark for the last 3 years. Redden is a tackle machine. All he needs to become an elite SuperCoach scorer is to lift his possession rate, as he is generally in the low 20s and/or sneak forward more often for some extra goals. Those types of things will come with natural development (he's only 23). If his NAB Challenge game vs Gold Coast is anything to go by, hes capable of increasing both; he had 28 disposals, 9 tackles, 6 marks and snuck forward for 2 goals on his way to 141 SuperCoach points.

Others to consider.....

Tom Rockliff - MID - $591,500

Rockliff is in 7% of sides, so not as much of a POD as most that I write about. However I thought he was worth the inclusion just because he is being over looked a bit. Averaged a touch under 110 last year and had a massive final 8 rounds. Should continue on with that this year. Only reason he is being overlooked is that Ablett, Pendlebury, Watson and Cotchin are also quality and are more popular selections. Adds a Point of Difference to your side, without having to risk a breakout or a comeback season! DPP would have been nice again, but not necessary.

Daniel Rich - MID - $463,500

Would probably be more inclined at his price to take him if he was positioned in FWD or DEF, which is probably what hurts his SC selection the most. Steadily averaged around 85 since his remarkable debut year. With Aish and Taylor coming to the side and Moloney last year, plus Rockliff and Redden, there's plenty of opportunity for Rich to move to half-back and be a play maker. If this happens, expect his scores to rise.