“ It's important to grab the big guns in your first few rounds - there are only a handful of players capable of averaging 110 or more.

After 5 rounds, ideally you want to have two gun midfielders, a very good ruckman, and a solid premium in both forward and defence.

How do you reckon I've done?

I'll keep updating this list through the pre-season and to try and get a perfect order.

If there's anything I've missed or you would like to see, hit me up on Twitter @joshschon or @SuperCoach_HQ or jump onto the Contact Us page on our website www.SuperCoachHQ.com.

SO MANY MIDS?

As you see on the Player Distribution Table to the left, midfielders far out-weigh any other position. This is due to the fact that midfielders are the highest scoring position, and also the largest position on the field. Try to target dual position players (DPPs) to fill your defence and forward lines.

IS IT A LOCK?

The list above should be used purely as a guide, as draft conditions can change very quickly. For example, if three or four ruckmen go in a row, and you don't have a big guy yet, skim down the order a bit and lock one in, as they can go quickly.

DON'T GET SUCKED IN!

It's easy to be tempted into picking a 'Buzz' player in SuperCoach draft who you may have heard mentioned for the regular thing. As a general rule of thing, pick established players and avoid those 'hype rookies'. For example, if you had to pick between Matt Boyd (established) or Tom Bell (hyped mid-price), you should go for Boyd and take the risk out of the equation.
